

Mrs. Quinn will be confronted at the inquest this afternoon with Charles A. Thorpe, son of her first husband.

He has informed the police that his father's mother, who lived with her son and daughter-in-law, died a few weeks before the former was shot.

Mrs. Quinn has stuck to her original story of the shooting of Quinn through all questionings of the police. She says that she saw the murderer as he fled from the room. Other boarders in the house, sleeping in adjoining rooms, heard the shot, but saw no one leave the premises.

Interrogated about the deaths of Thorpe and McDonnell, Mrs. Quinn refused to answer questions.

The police say that after her arrest she made an effort to conceal the fact of her marriage to Thorpe. This is considered significant, as his death was the only one in which an investigation was made, as a result of which she was held for several days.

One Killed, One Hurt in Wreck

Fireman William Jeffe of Vernon, Ill., was instantly killed, and Engineer Brazu of Peoria badly injured in a sideswiping accident on the Chicago & Northwestern near 45th street today.

A freight car's load of railway ties fell on the track in front of the engine manned by Brazu and Jeffe, and in the collision the men were crushed.

PHILADELPHIA'S MAYOR

Rudolph Blankenburg, Philadelphia's "War Horse of Reform."

He was elected mayor of the City of Brotherly Love yesterday, but the person who is going to do all the mayoring is Mrs. Rudolph Blankenburg, suffragette.

Grieved Over Wife's Death:

Aged Man Slays Self

That James Thompson, 63, was crazed with grief over the death of his wife, and slashed his throat rather than face his declining years alone, is the explanation of the police of the tragedy in the little home at 2708 W. Honore street. The dead bodies of the aged couple were found there today.

Mrs. Thompson lay on the bed, a peaceful smile on her face. Her husband's cold body was found in the bath tub, the throat slashed from ear to ear.